	Remarks	-
9	Valuation
	We conducted an extensive local market inquiry to determine the prevailing market or composite rate of the property in the surrounding area. This included consultations with local real estate experts and engaging with community residents familiar with property values and market trends. By analysing recent transactions and pricing dynamics, we've gained a comprehensive understanding of current market conditions. This information forms the basis for our informed estimation of the property's composite rate, ensuring accuracy and transparency in our valuation process.
	Particulars	Range
	Exploring the market conditions in the surrounding area	₹ 2700.00 - ₹ 3200.00 ₹ / s. feet
	Exploring the market conditions in the surrounding area	₹ 2700.00 - ₹ 3200.00 ₹ / s. feet
	A local market inquiry was conducted, involving local real estate brokers and residents, among others.
	Incorporating the information presented earlier, encompassing a range of factors such as property location, size, condition, and the specifics outlined in part 10 paragraph no. VI, the prevailing market / land rate for a comparable property in the nearby vicinity is currently estimated to fall between Rs. 35,000.00 and Rs. 45,000.00 per square yard. Taking all these factors into careful consideration, including the unique characteristics and location of the subject property, we have determined the unit rate as follows, drawing from our comprehensive evaluation.
	Description	Qty.
	Present value of the building (incl. car parking, if provided)
	Additional Value	Combined
	Total Fair Value
	Total Fair Value (Rounded off & in words)
	As a result of our appraisal and analysis, it is our considered opinion that the present fair market value of the above property in the prevailing condition with aforesaid specifications is <>. The book value of the above property is <> <> (As per sale deed). And the distress sale value <>.
	Fair Market Value
	The concept of Fair Market Value, as defined, centres around the estimated sum at which an asset could feasibly be exchanged on the designated valuation date. This exchange would transpire between two willing participants in a transaction that is impartial and equitable. This transaction follows a comprehensive marketing process, and the parties involved are expected to make well-informed, prudent decisions devoid of any undue influence or pressure. Given the existing state of usability and the specific attributes of the property under consideration, and drawing on my professional judgement, I propose considering the rounded-up value as the final figure, which I denote as <>.
	Realizable Value
	Realizable value pertains to the inherent worth of an asset that can be achieved through its successful sale, factoring in a prudent assessment of the associated costs. In light of a <>% discount, we assert our view that the Realizable value of the aforementioned property, in its current condition and with the specified attributes, stands at <>. This assessment considers the potential financial impact of the discount, ensuring a comprehensive understanding of the property's market value in relation to the costs involved.
	Forced Sale/ Distress Value

The fair value delineated above finds its application in a theoretical realm of an ideal market scenario. However, when the scenario shifts to circumstances where a financial institution seeks to recuperate its outstanding dues by initiating property sale proceedings, the aforementioned market price might not be directly applicable. This is due to the conventional nature of property payments, often spread out across a duration and paid through instalments. Yet, when a lender seeks to sell a property under enforcement, the expectation is for an immediate, lump-sum payment. However, this alignment might not be viable within an imperfect property market context. It's widely acknowledged that sales orchestrated by enforcing authorities often yield a value significantly lower than what the market could command. This discrepancy between the market price and the realised sale price becomes more pronounced. This contrast essentially stems from factors such as market dynamics, borrower cooperation, and prevailing market conditions, all contributing to the gap between perceived and realised values.

The determination of the appropriate discount for a particular property hinges on a multitude of variables, including but not limited to market influences, borrower's stance, property marketability, and prevailing conditions. As we delve into the specific property under consideration, our perspective leads us to opine that the forced sale value could likely hover between 20% to 30% below the market value. In light of these considerations, an average discount of approximately 25% is prudent for the purpose of this valuation.

Thus, based on our assessment, the estimated forced sale or distress value of the subject property amounts to <>. This value encapsulates a careful synthesis of market realities, borrower behaviour, and the unique circumstances surrounding the sale.

Government guideline value

Prevailing Govt. GuideLine/ Jantri rate derives to be <> per square meter for reasonably identical property, based on inquiry from the local revenue practitioners / registration - jantri value derived by the State Government represents guideline value fixed for stamp duty / registration purpose.

The Govt. of Gujarat has revised the Jantri rate vide Tharav No. STP-122023-20-H.1, Dated 13/04/2023 & implemented the same from dated 15/04/2023. For residential flat premises, Jantri rate is considered 1.8 times of rate of Jantri - 2011 (Copy attached).

Jantri rate for residential flat premises - year 2011

Revised Jantri rate as per Govt. notification

Sr. No	Description	Qty. (square meter)	Rate per unit (in ₹)	Estimated fair value (in ₹) i ii
iii
Total (i-iii)
Total Fair Value (Rounded off & in words)

The guideline value of the property as below is <>.

Government guideline value Justification

Generally the market rate of the property is higher than the government guideline rate (Jantri). As per Section, 50 C of the Income Tax Act Jantri rates are for stamp duty purpose only. These rates are considered as guideline rates only & they do not represent or reflect the True Market Value of any asset as upheld even by the court. So it is normal practice of doing valuation by local inquiries.

SUMMARY

After conducting a comprehensive appraisal and analysis, we hold the view that the current fair value of the property situated at <> as of <> is <>, which we consider to be equitable and rational.

Following our thorough assessment, we assert that the Realizable value of the property, considering the existing condition and specified attributes, amounts to <>.

For the property's distress value, our perspective, as of the valuation date, is <>.

Regarding the guideline value, our assessment, as of the valuation date, is <>.
